

I think the banking institutions trying to make an end run around my state's no-call list is despicable! The reason I signed up for both state and federal no-call lists is so I wouldn't be bothered with sales calls from anyone including banks. Just what the heck makes them think that they deserve special treatment? They're no different than any other sales organization. If I could stop the pesky political calls at election time I'd sign up for that too. The calls I got late at night got on my last nerve.
